

HS INDIA LIMITED

CIN - L55100MH1989PLC053417

06th August, 2024

To,

BSE Limited

Department of Corporate Services, Phiroze Jeejeebhoy Towers,
Dalal Street,
Mumbai – 400 001.

Sub: Newspaper advertisement of Un-audited Financial Statement for the quarter ended on 30.06.2024

Ref.: BSE Code - 532145

Dear Sir/Madam,

We are enclosing herewith copy of newspaper advertisement of Un-audited Financial Statement for the quarter ended on 30.06.2024 of the Company published in Financial Express (English edition) and Mumbai Lakshadip (Marathi Edition).

Kindly take the same on your record and oblige.

Thanking you,

Yours faithfully,

FOR HS INDIA LIMITED

Hitesh Limbani
Company Secretary
FCS - 12568

Encl.: As above

Premium play: IndiGo to introduce business class

To be offered on 12 domestic routes, starting Nov 14

FE BUREAU
New Delhi, August 5

AFTER SUCCESSFULLY RUNNING low-cost services for 18 years, IndiGo on Monday said it will introduce business class seats in select flights on 12 domestic routes, starting from November 14.

The airline also launched a customer loyalty programme, and is preparing to have wide-body A350 planes in 2027. These are part of the airline's measures to expand its business and strengthen its global presence. IndiGo CEO Peter Elbers said the business class seats will be open for booking from August 16 and the business class passengers will be offered special meals catered by Oberoi Hotels.

There will be a total of 12 seats in the configuration of 4 seats in 3 rows in the A321neo planes. These aircraft will have a total of 220 seats - 12 business and 20 economy class ones.

In the introduction of one-way fare, the airline said one seat will be starting at ₹15,000. Elbers said the business class seats will be available on the busier and business routes, and will be started with Delhi-Mumbai flights. Currently, Tata Group-owned Air India, Air India Express and Vistara offer business class seats. The business

STRENGTHENING GLOBAL PRESENCE

■ Customer loyalty programme launched; airline also preparing to have wide-body A350 planes in 2027

■ Business class seats to be open for booking from today; passengers to be offered special meals catered by Oberoi Hotels class fare by these carriers on a Delhi-Mumbai route is around ₹25,000.

PETER ELBERS, CEO, INDI GO

INDIA OF TODAY IS DIFFERENT FROM INDIA 18 YEARS AGO... THE ASPIRATIONS OF PASSENGERS HAVE EVOLVED

IndiGo has a domestic market share of nearly 61% and around 975 planes on order. At the end of June, the airline had 362 planes and operates over 2,000 flights daily, connecting more than 120 destinations.

The airline's customer loyalty programme, IndiGo EasChip, will go live in September. IndiGo is describing its new products as IndiGoRewards. "A total of 45,000 flights have been ordered to meet this demand," Elbers said. IndiGo will have 12 A321 neo aircraft featuring 12 business class seats and 20 economy class seats.

The introduction of one-way fare, the airline said one seat will be starting at ₹15,000. Elbers said the business class seats will be available on the busier and business routes, and will be started with Delhi-Mumbai flights. Currently, Tata Group-owned Air India, Air India Express and Vistara offer business class seats. The business airline said in a statement.

About IndiGo BluClip, the airline said as part of the next phase of growth towards becoming a global aviation player, it is time to recognise and reward most frequent flyers through the new loyalty programme.

IndiGo's remarks come against the backdrop of concerns in certain quarters about a promoter entity selling its stake amid ambitious plans for the airline.

In June, InterGlobe Enterprises sold 7.72 million shares, representing around 2% of the total share capital of InterGlobe Aviation, the parent of IndiGo.

Speaking at an event to mark 18 years of flying of IndiGo, co-founder Bhattacharya told the gathering that the stake was sold to raise funds for business and general corporate purposes.

"[The stake sale] is no more complex than that... InterGlobe and I are here to stay," Bhattacharya said.

IndiGo and I are here to stay: Bhattacharya

INDIGO CO-FOUNDER AND managing director Rahul Bhattacharya on Monday said he and InterGlobe Enterprises are here to stay, saying that the recent stake sale was to raise funds for business and general corporate purposes.

Bhattacharya's remarks come against the backdrop of concerns in certain quarters about a promoter entity selling its stake amid ambitious plans for the airline.

In June, InterGlobe Enterprises sold 7.72 million shares, representing around 2% of the total share capital of InterGlobe Aviation, the parent of IndiGo.

Speaking at an event to mark 18 years of flying of IndiGo, co-founder Bhattacharya told the gathering that the stake was sold to raise funds for business and general corporate purposes.

"[The stake sale] is no more complex than that... InterGlobe and I are here to stay," Bhattacharya said.

—FE BUREAU

Global firms lease 53 mn sq ft office space: Report

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, August 5

LEADING GLOBAL FIRMS have taken on lease nearly 53 million square feet of office space since 2022 across six major cities to set up Global Capability Centres (GCCs) with maximum demand in Bengaluru, according to CBRE and Zoya.

In their joint report, property consultant CBRE and hiring solutions firm Zoya highlighted that GCCs have significantly amplified their Indian operations over recent decades, propelled by a skilled workforce, cost efficiency, and a conducive business climate.

This GCC growth trajectory is anticipated to be concentrated in India's top six metropolitan areas, driven by their exceptional talent pools, enabling expansion and future development.

"Global corporations are affirming their long-term commitment to India by securing larger office spaces for their GCCs," the consultant said.

Nearly 55 million square feet of office space was leased by GBCs between 2022 and the first half of 2024 across Bengaluru, Hyderabad, Chennai, Pune, Delhi-NCR and Mumbai.

Out of these six cities, the share of Bengaluru in the total leasing for GBCs stood at 40%, followed by Hyderabad at 21% and Chennai at 14%.

Asked if he'll have to join the battlefield now that the Olympics are over, "I don't know," he mutters.

Next to him, Cenuchchenko breaks down, fearing for her friends and family. "I have many friends who are fighting now, and who died. It is very hard. They are very strong. This medal is for them. I can be here because they are at the front line," she says.

In a quavering voice, Mahuchikh calls the moment "incredible," given the circumstances. "In my country, the Russians killed people and almost 500 sportmen died in this war... they will never compete and celebrate and feel this atmosphere."

On the "biggest night" of his life, Mahuchikh's mind constantly goes back to the well-being of her family in Dnipro, her hometown. Home to military hospitals and rocket

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

H S INDIA LTD.

CIN: L55100MH1989PLC053417

Reg. Off.: Unit No.202, Morya Blue Moon, Off New Link Road, Andheri West, Mumbai - 400 053, Maharashtra. Website: www.hsindia.in

Tel: 022-69027777, Email: hsindia@rediffmail.com

EXTRACT STATEMENT OF STANDALONE UNAUDITED FINANCIAL RESULTS FOR THE QUARTER ENDED ON 30TH JUNE, 2024

Gr. No.

Particulars

Quarter ended 30/06/2024

Year ended 31/03/2024

Quarter ended 30/06/2023 (Un-audited)

(Audited)

Quarter ended 30/06/2023 (Un-audited)

(Un-audited)

asked if he'll have to join the battlefield now that the Olympics are over, "I don't know," he mutters.

Next to him, Cenuchchenko breaks down, fearing for her friends and family. "I have many friends who are fighting now, and who died. It is very hard. They are very strong. This medal is for them. I can be here because they are at the front line," she says.

In a quavering voice, Mahuchikh calls the moment "incredible," given the circumstances. "In my country, the Russians killed people and almost 500 sportmen died in this war... they will never compete and celebrate and feel this atmosphere."

On the "biggest night" of his life, Mahuchikh's mind constantly goes back to the well-being of her family in Dnipro, her hometown. Home to military hospitals and rocket

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

factories, Ukraine's industrial hub has been a regular target since the beginning of Russia's invasion in February 2022.

"Unfortunately, even at an Olympic Games, the war goes on," Mahuchikh says. "We've had a lot of alarms and explosions in my region. It's really tough for us, but we're fighting on every field. We do our best."

To put it mildly, doing their

best hasn't been easy. Among the countries that were once a part of the Soviet bloc, Ukraine has been the best performer at the Olympics, after Russia. When they left their homes, pained their lives and started afresh at new bases in new countries, these athletes worked hard if Ukraine's sporting fortunes would dip.

It hasn't, at least given the

situation. As of Monday afternoon, Ukraine, represented here by 142 athletes, has six medals, including two gold, the second won in fencing. Every medal and every medallist, though, has a story to tell.

Since the war began, hundreds of sports facilities across Ukraine have been destroyed. In Mariupol, the port city that's now occupied by Russia, an aquatics centre was bombed, forcing diver Stanislav Olychuk to alter his training plans.

